

GROWTH PLAN

Start with one canteen.

Then follow the tray: to every canteen a caterer runs, to more schools and campuses, then hospitals, offices and beyond.

An AI scanner that sees what's eaten.

Food type

recognises every dish

Amount

grams served, left and eaten

Nutrients

energy, protein, carbs, fat, fibre, sodium

620 g served – 95 g left = 525 g eaten

Two scans. Two people helped.

The kitchen
cooks to what people really eat

The person
sees their own meal and nutrients

Six steps. Same scanner.

One school canteen.

Set up

scanners where trays are collected and returned

The canteen operator

uses the Kitchen dashboard every day

Students

feed their Loopi by scanning lunch

We learn

real waste numbers, and whether it works day to day

Then every canteen that caterer runs.

One partner

a contract caterer already runs many school canteens

One dashboard

all their canteens side by side

A reason to act

caterers must now separate food waste

NEA, Resource Sustainability Act

More schools. Then university campuses.

317

MOE primary and secondary schools, each with a canteen

MOE, 2024

13.6%

of university students eat enough fruit and veg

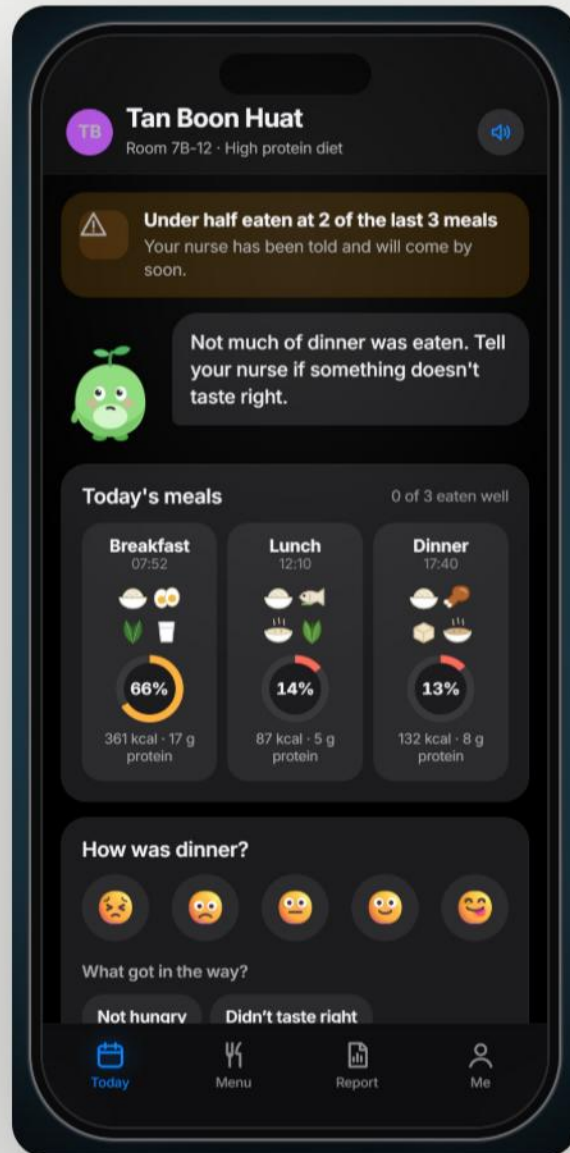

Chew et al., 2017

Same Loopi app

for teens and uni students

Hospitals: Loopi Care.

29%

of inpatients malnourished

Lim et al., Clinical Nutrition 2012

93%

of food charts incomplete

Palmer et al., 2015

What changes

every patient's tray is scanned, so nobody fills in a food chart

Who it helps

nurses get an alert, with the patient's reason, when meals go uneaten

Offices: Loopi Work.

6 in 10

Singaporeans eat out 4+ times a week
HPB, National Nutrition Survey

12.7%

of residents are obese, and rising
MOH, NPHS 2024

What changes
workers pre-order a pick for their health goal

Who it helps
the kitchen cooks to orders; the company sees team totals, never names

Everyone, everywhere.

A personal app

Photograph a meal before and after, anywhere, to see what you ate and its nutrients.

Beyond Singapore

Countries with big school-lunch programmes, like Japan and South Korea.

Same core. A new app for each place.

|                   | School                                                                              | Caterer                                                                               | Campus                                                                                | Hospital                                                                              | Office                                                                                | Everyone                                                                              |
|-------------------|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|---------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|---------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|---------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|---------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|---------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Scanner           |    |    |    |    |    |    |
| Kitchen dashboard |  |  |  |  |  |  |
| App for the eater | Loopi                                                                               | Loopi                                                                                 | Loopi                                                                                 | Loopi Care                                                                            | Loopi Work                                                                            | Personal app                                                                          |

FIRST STEP

It starts with one canteen.

PlateLoop: know what's eaten. Waste less.